The Charleston Judgeship.

The Republican members of the Legislature commit a fatal error, if they suppose that only persons of wealth and influence are deeply interested in the character of the persons who may be elevated to the Bench in t. . State. It is true that particular citizens of high position, who have made themselves conspicuous by the persistency of their opposition to corrupt practices, may be singled out as shining marks by any Judge who is so weak or so willing that the cliques who elect him can do with him as they will. And mch a judge, may, at critical moments, exert his official power in behalf of some man or some set of men whose crimes are known, and who have no hope of escaping punishment except by staving off investigation and trial. Beyond this-the persecution of particular members of the Opposition and the protection of conspicuous thieves in the ruling party-there is nothing for any honest citizen to gain, while there is everything to lose, by the election of any as Judge who is either ignorant or corrupt, the slave of passion or the servant of party.

A Judge who can be used to-day for what seems, in a party sense, a good a fair trial, if he be indicted by a Ring Solicitor, tried by a Ring Jury, and sentenced by a Ring Judge? This danger is one which confronts every citizen. Unless the Judge be upright and learned, no man is safe. The peril to the humbler citizen is more imminent than to the man of wealth. The poor man cannot employ counsel influence which, in these latter days, is potent with the aspiring Judge. The rich man has, at his command. the learning and forensic ability which only money can buy, besides the indirect bribery of social influence and social recognition. All the way through, the rich, where courts are venal or vindictive, have advantages which the poor, because they are poor, cannot the poor cannot. For the poor, and the majority of Republicans are poor, it is of the first consequence that a Judge be high-minded and capable: have been defeated, at the polls, by lents for a period of ten years the Republicans who desire Honesty and Reform. We have no particular candidate to urge upon the attention of the General Assembly. We know that there is little hope of the election of such a man as him who, with ermine all unstained, was on Saturday gathered to his fathers. But we have the right to ask, in the name of the influential and rich, that the Judge to be chosen on Friday be a man of good standing, of irreproachable antecedents, and of respectable ability .- News & Courier.

How Much Was He Worth?

The following which we take from "Good Words," is well worth attentive perusal and earnest thought .-"How much was he worth?" is a question which will come home to many heapers up of gold. Ponder it well,

There is a terrible significance in the question we sometimes ask, upon the death of a wealthy man, if we only understood the real significance of the question. "How much was he worth?" we ask. And the angels might reply: "Worth? He wasn't worth anything. His money was worth something, his body is worth something as a source of fertility to the soil; but he wasn't worth anything." So we vary the question: "Yes, but how much did he leave?" it might be answered .-"Yes, I will tell you. He had houses, lots, bonds, stocks, gold, notes, merchandise, farms; and he left them all-he carried nothing with him. Naked and destitute came he into the world, and as naked and destitute did he go the way whence he came. He carried nothing-neither land or monblessings of the poor. He left all; he carried nothing away with him."

But his neighbor has died-a man who was not known on 'Change, nor in the tax list. "And what has he left?" we may say, or, perhaps, curiously ask. "Left? He has left nothing; but he has taken much with him. He has gone to Heaven laden with the blessings and gratitude of the poor, of the helpless, of the young, of the aged, of the widow, of the friendless; of those whom he, by his counsels, and his acts, and his prayers, had blessed, of those whose poverty he had enlightened, whose darkness he had dispelled, whose bodies and souls he had fed." When Wilberforce died, Daniel O'Connell said, "He has gone up to heaven bearing a million broken fetters in his hand." Happy he, whatever he may leave, or may not leave, on earth, who goes thus freighted into | in its library. the other world.

PROPOSED CIVIL RIGHTS COMPRO-MISE.-A Washington letter says: "The advocates of the civil rights bill finding themselves confronted by the Executive veto should they persist in by putting on a new hat. carrying that odious measure through Congress, are now talking of a compromise of some of the more radical features proposed in the original bill. in hopes of forcing some action before the expiration of the present Congress. As an offset to the mixed-school question they propose to set apart the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, which shall constitute an educational fund. The amount thus accumulated they propose shall be distributed among the States on the kasis of illitelargest share, and provisions would be incorporated so as to enforce in an indirect manner, at the cost of the government, what they have been sure destruction of the public school system of the United States. The opponents of any Congressional interference in the matter of schools, with the aid of the Democratic vote, will doubt- subscribers, and we trust it will get less be able to defeat any such appli-cation of the public money. It is wisely feared that the application of the moneys as stated would establish a system as extravagant and glaring ried and interesting, and beautifully interin corruption as the defunct Freed-

The Promised Reform.

The fair promises of reform made before the election, and the subsequent promises of Mr. Chamberlain in his inaugural have been gladly received. Hope has sprung up in every heart, and there is a disposition to extend to him that sympathy and kindness of feeling which was not accorded to his predecessors, and the withholding of of complaint by Ex-Gov. Scott. His minont abilition are conceded by all, it is thought that he not only sees changed order of things known as Rewhere the reform should commence, but has the disposition to commence and carry it out. This is what the people stood ready to believe after reading his admirable inaugural, and still hope to realize.

The question now is, will all these fair promises be carried out, or was his first speech a mere show of words only intended to make an impression for a brief time. We trust the latter may not be experienced. It is said by some that he cannot go back on the party which elected him, and that those men who worked the hardest to put him in office are those who will be appointed to positions of trust and profit. This is a dangerous principle and one which cannot be executed honestly and with justice to the peo ple whose interests are at stake, and who to some extent at least should be considered. We trust this is not the principle which will govern Mr. Chamberlain, but that he will endeavor to ey; nor yet did he carry with him the do that which will subserve to the greatest good; a course which will gain him the respect and good will of the State and the gratitude of her

A Short Postponement of the Fifth Gift Con-

As manager of the gift concerts given in aid of the Public Library of Kentucky, my position creates an important trust in behalf of the Public Library and the ticket-holders of the fifth gift concert. The Public Library of Kentucky and the ticket-holders are jointy interested in the amount of the drawing. The larger the fund to be distributed in gifts, the greater will be the gift awarded to each lucky ticket-holder and the more the amount ing is so manifestly to the interest of those interested, that, rather than have a fractional drawing on the 30th inst., I deem it due to the trust confided to me by ticket-holders and the Public Library of Kentucky, that a short postponement be made to quable me to dispose of the unsold tickets, and have a ful drawing. Though the very large amount now in bank would enable us to distribute
